GHASTLY COLLISION.

Two Railroad Trains Crash Into Each Other While Running at Their Utmost Speed.

Seven Passengers Instantly Killed and Others Terribly Bruised and Mangled.

Two Venturesome Young Ladies Have a Narrow Escape—Marrying for a Title.

MANSFIELD, Sept. 21.—A terrible accident is reported on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad. The Pittsburg and New York limited, No. 38, east bound, which left this city at 12:19 this morning, collided with the westbound freight train, two miles west of Shrieve. Both trains were running at a high rate of speed and the wreck was complete. The following are known to be killed and their bodies have been already taken from the wreck: Three postal clerks, one engineer, two firemen, two passengers a man and a woman. It is reported here that the wreck caught fire and that a number of people were roasted to death. The following information has been obtained at the office of General Superintendent Watts of the Pennsylvania Company: Seven people were killed and others injured. Five passenger cars were burned up and two engines and two freight cars demolished in a terrible head on collision at Shrieve, O., on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway about three o'clock this morning. The cause of the accident was neglect of orders upon the part of the freight train crew. Details of the accident are meagre, as the local officials of the company can give out only a general statement. It was learned that the limited when speeding past Shrieve with a supposed clear track, the freight, which had been ordered to remain on the siding at Wooster to allow it to pass, for some cause not known or through disregard of orders pulled out, and dashed down the track under full headway. The flash of the headlights was the first warning received by the engineers, who simultaneously reversed their engines. This was too late, and the huge engines crashed into one another almost at full speed. The crash was terrible as the trains came together; the engines reared high from the track, while the momentum drove them fairly through each other, and then, with hissing steam and boiling water pouring from every seam and rivet hole they fell into the ditch alongside the track. The five cars were instantly telescoped until little but a jumble of wood and iron remained. The panic-stricken passengers were bruised, stunned and thrown from their berths and seats. With the first crash the lives of some went out. The engineer of the freight train jumped from his engine and escaped instant death, but is seriously injured. The postal car caught fire and the flames rapidly spread to the express and baggage, smoker and first class coaches. The night was pitch dark, but the horrible spectacle was illuminated with the brilliant glare from the rapidly burning cars. The accident occurred about two miles from the village of Shrieve. The country folk, trainmen and passengers at once set about the work of rescuing those imprisoned in the wreck of the coaches. A messenger was dispatched to Shrieve for assistance and from that point word was sent to the railway officials.

Iron Ore Mining.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 21.—The Standard Ore Company, in which are interested the magnates of the Standard Oil and other corporations, notably the American Steel Barge Company, builders of the whaleback vessels, has just received a lot of mining machinery for the Cincinnati mine on the Mesaba range. The ore company has leased the Cincinnati mine, and will remove a minimum of about 200,000 tons of Bessemer ore yearly. It is stated by the directors that the Carnegie Steel Company has purchased the entire output of the mine for a term of years under certain conditions. Altogether the Carnegie Company has contracted for the annual delivery of over 500,000 tons from this region. The Cincinnati will be operated by underground mining, and several working shafts are already in the ore. The Biwabic, whose ore body is merely a continuation of the Cincinnati, is said to have the greatest amount of ore in sight that has ever been produced from a single mine, twenty million tons.

Venturesome Young Girls.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 21. — Salline Kimiter Moss, of Athens, and a young woman companion, while taking a midday stroll at Tallulah Falls, decided to explore the Grand Cavern. Down the winding slope they clambered until they could go no further then they tried to return, but were horrified to find that they were unable to ascend the steep cliffs they had passed down. At home the friends and parents of the fair prisoners became alarmed when night fell, and supposing that the girls had become imprisoned in the hills, relief parties were organized. About ten this morning Will Moss heard their cries and discovered their location, but he could not reach them. Ropes were spliced together till long enough to reach the bottom of the cavern. The young women tied the rope around their waists and were thus drawn out.

An Extraordinary Wager.

OGDEN, Utah, Sept. 21.—Haseg Mohamed, "King of Tramps," was married in the Grand Opera House last night to Emily S. Campbell, of Sacramento, Cal. Mohamed has been a pedestrian for 22 years, and is now performing a feat by which he may win $15,000. He is to walk 1000 miles in 450 days or lose $5000, which he has deposited as forfeit money. He started from Cincinnati, Ohio, last March with one cent, and was to make his way with a wheelbarrow, not to beg or steal, and was to marry some woman on his travels. This last stipulation he has fulfilled. He has walked nearly 500 miles.

Cameron Libel Suits.

GODERICH, Ont., Sept. 21.—The Cameron libel prosecutions against the publishers of the Goderich Star and the Toronto World, which have been attracting considerable attention, were concluded to-day. Although the result is a nominal vindication for Mr. Cameron, in the Star case, no bill was returned in the case of Mr. Maclean, of the World.

NANAIMO NOTES.

Fine Buildings Being Erected—The Electric Light Question—Wily Klootchmen.

NANAIMO, Sept. 21.—The steamer City of Nanaimo was crowded by excursionists, who have gone to Westminster to witness the opening of the exhibition there. The excursion was under the auspices of the C.O.O.F., M.U., who have been busy for the past two weeks in selling tickets. They were accompanied by the Nanaimo Silver Cornet Band, who will play on the grounds.

Building operations are being pushed forward as rapidly as possible in every part of the city. The large brick building belonging to Jeff Davidson on Victoria Crescent is rising rapidly. The builders are anxious to make the most of the present fine weather, and a large force of men is constantly employed.

For years two klootchmen named Curly Annie and Louisa have been inveigling seamen to purchase whiskey for them, or if they observed a man in his cabin under the influence of liquor they would enter and take part in the drinking, and consequently the man would be brought before the magistrates on the charge of furnishing whiskey to Indians. Many are under the impression that these two women are working for the police. However that may be, it is openly stated here that it is about time the magistrates took a different view of the case by sentencing these two decoys (they can be called nothing else) and then probably this nefarious business will end.

It appears as though the Electric Light By-Law will receive a hoist at least for this year as Mayor Haslam finds under the existing municipality law the city cannot borrow the sum required this year. Already the loan of $20,000 has been provided for and to raise $40,000 more the council will have to wait till next year. The matter has been submitted to Drake, Jackson & Helmcken of Victoria.

Mr. J. H. Hacking found a Chinaman red-handed yesterday stealing chickens, but the celestial decamped before Hacking could lay hands on him, and left the chickens behind. The birds were given to the police.

SAFE IN VANCOUVER.

The Missing Seal Hunters and Crews Arrived Safely in the Terminal City.

The three boats' crews lost from the schooner W. P. Sayward and the one lost from the Marvin off Copper Island have arrived safely in Vancouver, and it is thought that they are accompanied by the two crews lost by the Annie C. Moore.

This afternoon Mr. Andrew Laing, owner of the schooner W. P. Sayward, received a telegram from Neil Morrison, one of his hunters, stating that he and his companions had arrived at Vancouver.

Another despatch was received by Mr. Wm. White stating that "Billy" Shields and the Marvin's crew had also arrived.

No word had been received from the Moore's crews, but it is supposed that they also are there; but how they reached there is a mystery. It is thought, however, that they came across on the schooner Beatrice, which arrived yesterday.

IN AID OF CHRIST CHURCH.

Opening of the Grand Baaaar to Help the Building Fund.

The bazaar in aid of Christ church cathedral building fund was opened today by Mayor Beaven, and the Warspite band discoursed very fine music. The attendance was very good; the different booths are works of art and would well repay the investment of the small sum of one dime charged for admission. A grand concert will be given this evening when it is expected the capacity of the hall will be tested by the crowd that will attend. The bazaar continues to-morrow, the band of the French flagship giving a concert in the evening.

She Gets a Title.

NEWPORT, R.I., Sept. 21.—The engagement of Miss Grace Wilson, youngest daughter of Mr. T. R. Wilson, and sister of Mrs. Ogden G. Goelet, the great belle in New York since her late debut in society there, to the Hon. Cecil Baring, second son of Lord Revelstoke, is announced. Mr. Baring is a very fashionable man in London, and several of his family have been raised to the peerage, the first of whom was Lord Ashburton.

Over a Century Old.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., Sept. 21.—Viola Porter Chappelle, probably the oldest woman in the state, died at her home at Ellington on Sunday, at the age of 109. She was in possession of all her senses until her death, but for many years her body has been so weak that she had to be lifted from her bed to a chair. She was a colored woman and lived in Ellington for the past seventy years. During that time she has never been out of town and has never ridden on a railroad train.

EMIGRANTS COMING HERE.

Released Cholera Suspects on Their Way to British Columbia From Quebec.

No Cases in New York—Longueil Declares War Against all German Passengers.

Fiends Deliberately Wreck a Passenger Train in Kansas With Awful Results.

QUEBEC, Sept. 20.—An amicable settlement was reached between the steamship and railway companies of the trouble about the Mongolian's emigrant tickets through to United States points. All but ten accepted a refund on their tickets and purchased transportation to Canadian points, chiefly to Manitoba and British Columbia. Those who refused to accept the refund are still here. It is expected they will be returned to England by the first vessel.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—If the municipalities around Montreal get cholera, it will not be because they neglected to take all precautions because the German S.S. Wandrahm is quarantined in the harbor. The Mayor of Longueuil has ordered out the police and fire brigade and lined the banks of the river. No persons speaking German will be allowed on shore. On the wharf is the steam engine, ready with a shower bath for any unfortunate German who attempts landing there.

FIENDISH TRAIN WRECKERS.

Awful Consequences Attending the Derailing of an Express Train.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 21.—A passenger train on the Santa Fe road was wrecked by train robbers near Osage City, thirty miles southwest of here, early this morning. It is stated that five passengers were killed and many injured. There was a million dollars in treasure on board the train. A bulletin from Topeka this afternoon says:—One of the most destructive train wrecks ever known in the history of the Atchison road took place this morning. The train wreckers' object was robbery. The train was the Missouri River night express, from Denver and San Francisco. At least five lives were lost and more than a score of passengers were seriously injured. In the express car was one million dollars in specie, shipped by the Mexican Central Railway through to the general offices in Boston. The object of the wreckers was not accomplished owing to the manner in which the express car was buried by the coaches piled upon it in the general confusion. So high was the wreckage heaped that it was utterly impossible to find the car, let alone the treasure box. The place selected for the wreck lies between Barclary and Osage City. There is a heavy grade here, and frequent curves mark the course of the track. East-bound trains pass over this stretch with great speed and the ill-fated night express was making fifty miles an hour when it rounded the curve fifty yards west of the point where the wreckers had removed the bolts from the east rail, tearing it outward toward the embankment, thus switching the train off the road-bed. Ed. Mayer, of this city, was the engineer in charge. Just before reaching the wreckers' improvised switch he noticed a rail misplaced but there was not time to stop the train. He threw the throttle open, hoping he might be able to jump the break in safety and avert the impending calamity. The embankment at this point is about eight feet high. The engine plunged over it, following the course prepared by the would-be robbers. The train was composed of thirteen cars, and all except three sleepers were piled on top of the engine. Most of those overturned were broken into splinters. Fortunately fire did no break out, and it was with difficulty that a hole was opened to let the passengers out. The sight that met those who escaped death or injury was horrible. The engine had gone to the bottom of the hill, and on top was piled the wreckage of five cars, covering it so completely that it was hidden from sight, unless one clambered down into the death pit. Utter confusion describes the scene. Engineer Mayer was thrown from the cab some distance away and had been almost cooked alive by steam from the broken boiler. He was perfectly conscious, but died in horrible agony in a short time. Before his death he said he saw the rail displaced and told of his brave but desperate effort to prevent the delailment of the train. As soon as news was received at the company's office in this city a relief train was made up and sent out with a number of surgeons and other assistance. The train returned to Topeka at 10:20 a.m., with the wounded and dead, and all the passengers. Those who were not seriously injured were sent on their journey by special train immediately after dinner. The dead were placed in caskets before removal from the train, the wounded were taken to the hospitals.

The tool house at Barclay, three miles west of the scene of the accident, was broken open last night and a number of tools removed, several empty whisky bottles were found in a pool of water near the scene of the wreck. Several passengers say they saw a number of men run for the brush immediately after the disaster. Two freight trains pulled into Osage only ten minutes before the passenger train was due, so it is known the work of the miscreants was done immediately before the arrival of the train. Officers are now scouring the country, searching for the wreckers.

New Transatlantic Liners.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Contracts have just been signed for the immediate construction of two 8000 ton steamers on the Clyde for the American trade. A London newspaper, making the announcement, said that these boats were for the Inman line. This is not true. The fact will occasion some surprise that they are to be built for an American line, and will ply between Philadelphia and Liverpool. The Philadelphia business of the American line will not be moved to Southampton. It is an open question whether these boats, after being built here will be transferred to the American flag under the recent or some future act of congress. They will hardly come under the provision of the recent act, for they will fill the requirements only in point of tonnage. They will not be fast ships, and they are not designed for first-class passenger service. They are intended chiefly for immigrant and freight service, and will make about 15 knots with a low consumption of coal.

WELL DONE, DOCTOR.

A Good Word Put in for Victoria by Dr. G. J. Milne.

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—The Dominion of Canada Medical Association met this morning in the railway committee room of the House of Commons and will sit for three days. Dr. Milne of Victoria is present. Dr. Campbell of Montreal, when the nominating committee was being appointed, suggested that they should consider the advisability of having the next meeting at Victoria, B.C. Dr. Milne strongly advocated the association meeting there next year, and spoke of the advantage it would be to the association and of the hearty welcome which would be accorded the members if they did go to the Pacific coast, as he hoped they would. Dr. Milne was appointed one of the nominating committee. They will make their report to-morrow.

The committee of the Medical Association will report in favor of Dr. Sheard of Toronto as President. One of the vice-presidents is Dr. Milne, of Victoria.

THE ROYAL CITY FAIR.

A Cold and Cheerless Morning—Arrival of the Visitors.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Sept. 21.—The Royal City is crowded with visitors for the annual exhibition. The carnival morning broke cold and wet; but towards noon it cleared up. The Islander arrived before 8 with 400 passengers, having on board the remainder of the Victoria K. of P. and the Odd Fellows from Seattle and the Sound cities. The Sound cities' contingent did not arrive till 11, the steamer Sehome having encountered bad weather in the gulf. The steamer was crowded with three divisions of the K. of P. and the First National Band. They were met on the wharf by the B.C. division of the K. of P. Immediately afterwards a huge procession formed on Columbia street, headed by Lieut.-Gouernor Nelson and Mayor Townsend. The carriages were followed by bands, visiting celebrities, divisions of K. of P., Odd Fellows, Foresters, lacrosse players, and hundreds of others. The procession, by a long route, passed through the K. of P.'s beautiful arch, on to the Park, where the Governor officially declared the exhibition opened.

The Pythian drill competition drill is still progressing. The streets have a most animated appearance, the decorations being the best for many years. The Queen's Park is now full of visitors, probably one of the largest crowds ever gathered there.

The building exhibits are very plentiful, but judging is not yet complete. The agricultural display is up to former years, horses and cattle being much better. This evening a promenade concert will be given in the exhibition building, and a general illumination of the city will take place. Hundreds are still arriving by boats, trams and special trains and everything points to a most successful carnival, if the elements remain favorable.

Victoria Knights made a most creditable turnout in the procession. The playing of the Athletic club band was greatly appreciated and commented upon.

D. Smith admitted burglarising a fellow lodger's trunk and was sent up for trial this morning.

The Licensing Board adjourned for a week on account of the exhibition. The ladies of the W.C.T.U. are going to fight the granting of a license to the International Hotel.

The revenue cutter Constance has been making seizures of contraband goods along the St. Lawrence, especially on the south shore, and many barrels of brandy and whiskey have been added to government stock.

It is yet uncertain whether on not the New Brunswick general election will be held this autumn, but it is known that the Government are preparing for action, and the Opposition are also beginning the work of organization.

A petition against the return of ex-Speaker Jackson, for Rockwood, has been filed at Winnipeg. The charges are the usual ones of bribery and corruption. In addition there are charges of personation, and that improper ballots were introduced into the ballot boxes.

La Minerve, a leading French Canadian Conservative journal, announces that no change will take place in the Cabinet until the return of Sir John Abbott from the old country. It further states that should Sir John Abbott retire on account of ill-health, it has been decided that Sir John Thompson will be his successor.

Collector Ruel, of St. John, has delivered over to the Marshal of the Admiralty Court the American fishing schooner Hattie M. Proceedings will be taken with a view to her confiscation. An appraisement will probably be made so that the owners, by depositing the amount of the value of the vessel, can take her away.

Detective Duncan of Toronto has now in his possession worthless Bank of Prince Edward Island bills to the face value of over $1200, which have been passed on shopkeepers in different parts of the city by a man named Riggs, from Buffalo, within the past few days. He had $700 stowed away in a kodak which he carried with him.

Julian Brosseau alias Charles Gigure, 50 years old, a customs officer at Montreal, was arrested at Boston charged with embezzling $1700 of her Majesty's customs receipts. Brosseau has been a collector at Montreal for 20 years, and the aggregate of his thefts is said to be $5000. He acknowledges having stolen perhaps $6000, but has no money now.

Advices from Rat Portage announce the sale of the Sultana mine to a company of English and American capitalists, who will put in the necessary machinery for developing and treating the rich output of this valuable property. The price has not been made public, but it is reported the owners have received a cash payment of $125,000. Dr. Scovil has also disposed of one of his gold properties at a handsome figure.

About a year ago Henry Gale committed an assault on a woman at Cornwall, Ont., and escaped to New York state. He was traced to Madrid, N.Y., forcibly arrested and brought to Canada, where he was found guilty and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. The case was brought to the attention of the United States consul, who communicated with the Dominion authorities. As a result he has been ordered to be returned to Madrid.

Le Canada, the Ottawa French paper, announces on what it calls reliable authority that Premier Abbott goes to England with the object of receiving an hereditary title from Her Majesty. Hon. George E. Foster, Minister of Finance, the same paper announces, has to explain to Lord Rosebery the charges preferred against him as a Canadian delegate to the United States Government, of having broken his pledges in disclosing prematurely the result of the conference at Washington.

The Grand Army.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—To-day there was something of a lull in the excitement caused by the reunion. At 10 o'clock this morning the annual business meeting of the G. A. R. was called to order. The time was largely taken up with commemorative exercises and the reports of the national officers, and the annual election will not be reached until a late hour or perhaps to morrow. The contest for the position of commander in chief promises to be a lively one. California's favorite son, Col. R. H. Warfield, has made the strongest canvass, and it looks at present as though he would be chosen. This afternoon a concert was given on the Capitol grounds by the largest band ever heard, being composed of the visiting and marine bands, numbering in their aggregate membership over a thousand musicians. The members of the 4th New York Volunteers, the well-known Scott Life Guards, left here last night and early this morning for Antietam, where they have erected a monument. The battlefield of Antietam is singularly destitute of memorials, the one to be dedicated to day being only the third that has been erected. It is situated in the rear of the New York section of the National Cemetery, is about 11 feet high, and built of light granite with appropriate inscriptions on all four sides. One of the plates contains the names of the 36 heroes who fell on the 17th of September, 1862. The Seventeenth Army Corps held its reunion in the Sherman Tent in Grand Army Place this afternoon.

A SECOND SKOBELOFF.

General Dragomiroff Punished for Using Insulting Language.

VIENNA, Sept. 20.—The retirement by the Czar of General Dragomiroff, the Moltke of the Russian army, has caused a genuine sensation among military men throughout Europe. Dragomiroff was chief of the Kieff district, including the 11th, 10th, 9th and 12th army corps. He was the hero of the Russian-Turkish war, and expected to command the Russian army in the next war. He was the most popular soldier of the empire, idolized by the rank and file and treated by the officers as an oracle in all military matters. While something of a martinet, he has been a student and written a famous book of the field. His military articles in the magazines have been accepted as gospel throughout Europe. Dragomiroff's fall was due to the rashness of his criticisms at the manœuvres. Several times he has offended the Czar by his brusque comments on the behavior of the troops. During the great fall manœuvres of 1891, in giving orders, he said: "The soldier must always advance, cartridges must not be spared, for where the loss of human life does not count it is ridiculous to spare guns and ammunition. I saw the reserves yesterday firing. Are our officers such blockheads as not to know that an attack does not fairly begin until within 200 or 300 paces of the enemy?" Dragomiroff never wearied of denouncing the weakness of commanders who think more of men's lives than of the battle. "He must be made familiar with death, must always be prepared to die, and must regard it as his duty to kill as many as possible of the enemy." To harden the nerves of his troops, he was wont to station soldiers alongside the targets during the army practice. His favorite observation was that the Russian soldier was an automaton, standing fire like an outside person and waiting orders like a slave. He awaited opportunities of revenge while in his cups, for he is a heavy drinker, and when intoxicated, abused the highest and lowest without restraint. Recently the Czar commanded the Minister of War to reprimand Dragomiroff for breach of etiquette. The reprimand arrived at Kieff, where he was drunk, and, in the presence of several officers, he cursed and ridiculed the Minister of War. His wards were reported to the War Office and the Czar at once, and Dragomiroff's retirement followed. This action is regarded as significant of peace, for had the Czar expected war soon he certainly would not have retired his ablest general.

Underwriters' Convention.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Life insurance men from all over the country have been gathering in this city for the past few days to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters, which opened to-day. The gatherings of the association are largely social affairs, although quite an extensive business programme has been prepared for the present occasion. The matter of endowing a chair of life insurance in the Chicago University, which was considered at the last annual meeting in Detroit, will probably be taken up. The most important question to be acted upon, however, is the matter of guerrilla solicitors, and it is probable that a war of extermination will be declared against them. Instances were cited before the committee to-day where these disreputable agents had frightened and coerced policy holders in reliable companies to cancel their policies and take out new ones in the companies represented by the piratical brokers. The committee will recommend that these gentry be handled without gloves, and that a system of boycotting, in which their names will be furnished all reputable companies, be adopted to the end that they may be run out of business and exposed at every opportunity. All the companies in the association will be asked to work together to blacklist these dishonest brokers.

The Question of Divorce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—In the Provincial Synod much time was occupied in discussing the schemes presented by the Winnipeg delegates for the consolidation of the church, and some clauses were carried. The questions of marriage and divorce were brought forward, and Rev. Provost Body, of Toronto, presented a report and canon on the subject, to the effect that in all cases where divorce was obtained for any other cause than adultery, and the parties married again, the holy communion should be denied them unless in the event of repentance and separation or imminent danger of death.

Hon. Edward Blake's Reception.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—The Irish citizens who favor Home Rule for Ireland, gave Hon. Edward Blake, M.P. for South Longford, Ireland, a public reception last night. Over 4000 people were present, two members of the Dominion Government, Hon. Frank Smith and John Costigan, attending. The former was chairman. In his reply Mr. Blake dealt with the economic evils of Ireland, showing that the present condition was due to the existence of a perpetual class of landlords and a perpetual class of tenants, a condition under which the producing class was despoiled of all but a bare subsistence. Sometimes, he said, they were not allowed to retain even a bare living, and the contributions of relations who had emigrated were absorbed by the landlords. He was convinced of the necessity of a system of resident freeholders. Addresses were also delivered by Archbishop Walsh and several members of the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments.

THE HIRED MAN.

A Type of One of the Old-Time New England Characters.

Edward Everett Hale in Atlantic Monthly.]

The few New England children who still read the Rollo books will have pleasant remembrances of Jonas and Beechnut, in whom Mr. Jacob Abbott has presented for posterity the hired boy of New England country life. In life in a little town like Boston, this hired boy might grow to be the hired man, and, as in Fullum's exceptional case, might grow to be 100 years old, or nearly that, without changing that condition. If that happened, his presence in a family became a factor of importance to the growing children. In the case of Fullum, if, as he supposed, he was born in 1790, he was 32 years old when in 1822 he took me in his arms, when I was an hour old.

Fullum, then, had been a country boy, who came down from Worcester county to make his fortune. I do not know when, but it was before the time of the short war with England. He expected to be, and was, the hired boy and hired man in one and another Boston family. Early in the business, he was in William Sullivan's service. He was driving Mr. Sullivan out of town one day when they found Roxbury street blocked up by the roof of the old meeting house, which had been blown into the street by the gale of 1815. Afterward he was in Daniel Webster's service, and here also he took care of horses and carriages. He was a born tyrant, and it was always intimated that Mr. Webster did not fancy his rule. Any way, he came from the Websters to us, I suppose, when Mr. Webster went to Congress, in the autumn of 1820; and, in one fashion or another, he lived with our family, as a most faithful vassal or tyrant, for 66 years from that time. I say "vassal or tyrant," for this was a pure piece of feudalism; and in the feudal system the vassal is often a tyrant, while the master is almost always a slave. So is it that the memories of my boyhood are all mixed up with memories of Fullum.

I have spoken of him in connection with Miss Whitney's school. Here was a faithful man Friday, who would have died for any of us, so strong was his love for us, yet who insisted on rendering his service very much in his own way. If my father designed a wooden horse for me, to be run on four wheels, after the fashion of what were called velocipedes in those days, he would make the drawings, but it would be Fullum's business to take them to the carpenter's and see the horse made. If we were to have heavy hoops from water casks, Fullum was the person who conducted the negotiations for them. There was no harm in the tutorship to which we were thus entrusted. He never used a profane or impure word while he was with us children; and as he was to us an authority in all matters of gardening, of carpentry, of driving and the care of horses, we came to regard him as, in certain lines, omniscient and omnipotent. If now the reader will bear in mind that this omniscient and omnipotent person, at once the Hercules and the Apollo of our boyhood, could not read, write or spell so well as any child four years old who has been 12 months at Miss Whitney's school, that reader may understand why a certain scorn of book-learning sometimes stains these pages, otherwise so pure. And if the same reader should know that this same Fullum always spoke in superlatives, and multiplied every figure with which he had to do by hundreds or by thousands, he may have a key to a certain habit of exaggeration which has been detected in the present writer. "They was 10,000 men tryin' to git in. But old Reed, he wouldn't let um." This would be his way of describing the effort of four or five men to enter some place from which Reed, the one constable of Boston, meant to keep them out.

IMPROVED PHOTOGRAPHY.

A Process by Which Sixty Prints a Minute May be Made.

Once there was a photographer who took a picture of a busy man. The busy man, as directed, held his chin a little higher, assumed a pleasant expression, which was a cross between an idiotic grin and the stony glare of a graven image, fixed his attention upon the crack in the wall indicated by the plate manipulator, sat perfectly still until the operator said "steady now," and then shook like an aspen until the cap was put back on the camera.

Then the photographer said "Six dollars, please; I'll send your proofs around next week." But the man wanted them sooner than that, and they had quite a row, too, over the weeks that must elapse before he got the finished pictures, and the victim finally went away after saying that he didn't see why there shouldn't be some way to shorten the time of printing photographs.

That started the photograph man thinking, and a series of experiments was commenced lasting over a good many years. The fruit of his labor has lately been introduced to the picture-making fraternity, where it has caused an immense amount of talk.

This is the new way: After a negative is made, developed, and retouched in the usual manner it is placed in the upper lid of a box-like arrangement in which the printing is done. This box is eight inches wide and eighteen inches long, and the upper lid slopes from ten inches or a foot at one end to about four or five inches at the other. Over the opening into which the negative is slipped is a wooden flap-shutter held closely down to the lid by a spring, completely shutting out the light. Just under the negative is a padded support of the same dimensions as the negative. Between this and the negative a thick photographic print paper highly sensitized is automatically fed from a roll by the action of a lever at the back of the box. Each movement of this lever moves the paper forward just the length of a photograph, and raises and drops the shutter on the lid in the fraction of a second, thus making an exposure. As the paper after exposure passes from the pad it is automatically snipped off and dropped into a drawer inside the machine. After the desired number of prints have been made, a slide is inserted in the top of the drawer, and it is taken out and carried to the dark room. Here, with the same baths he would use in developing a negative, the operator develops the prints and afterwards tones and fixes them as in the case of an ordinary print. The back of the paper is treated with a secret preparation, so that when it comes from the fixing solution it may be mounted without the use of paste and put through the burnisher at once.

The rapidity with which the process is worked is something to open the eyes of an operator used only to the old way. The printing is done at the rate of 50 or 60 a minute and may be effected with any kind of light. A kerosene lamp may be used when daylight is gone with just as satisfactory results. The development of the prints is limited only by the size of the bath. In an emergency, and as a test of the capabilities of the new scheme, a man sat for his picture and a dozen mounted and burnished prints were delivered to him an hour later.

Of course, the chief feature of the new process is the paper, which is sensitized with a patented preparation and coated on the back with a gum solution which is good "forever," and which will not stick to any other print in the bath. The prints are susceptible of finish in all shades from a light brown to a deep black, and have all the permanency of the old process productions. The company leases the printing machines to photographers at so much a year, and sells them the paper at about the price of the best ordinary paper.

The great feature of the process aside from the rapidity of the printing is that it is not hindered by cloudy weather, and the work of the studio cannot be delayed by a week or two of rain. Its cutting down of time will be most appreciated by the commercial photographers who have frequently to make a thousand or more prints from the same negative, and whose work is much interfered with by cloud-banked skies.

THE McGREEVY CASE.

There is something suspicious about the Dominion Government's treatment of the McGreevy case. Last week when it was called up at the Ottawa assizes the legal representative of Sir John Thompson asked for a postponement, on the plea that some of the Connolly firm's books had not been produced, though the firm had given an undertaking to produce them. Both Connolly and Thomas McGreevy, the accused, have said they were anxious to have the trial go on because they were tired of waiting. Connolly also said that his firm had brought forth all the books and papers in their possession, and if any were missing they must be in the keeping of the Government or the House of Commons. Is it possible that the Government has hidden its own evidence in order to delay the case and probably kill it off altogether? Here is Thomas McGreevy's statement in reply to a question as to his idea of the Government's reasons for asking a postponement of the trial:—

"Only a few days ago my counsel, Hon. S. H. Blake, sent each member of the Government a subpœna, requiring his attendance as witness at the trial. The testimony of the ministers is necessary and important, and after the subpœnas were served, I heard that the witnesses in Quebec had got word not to come to Ottawa. Possibly the ministers are not willing to go into the witness box and subject themselves to an examination. When the majority report of the privileges and elections' subcommittee was prepared for submission to the main committee, it contained no suggestion about prosecuting either the contractors or myself. The subcommittee, you remember, was composed of Davies and Mills, Reformers, and Girouard, Adams and another Conservative; but when the draft report prepared by the Conservative members was shown to Dalton McCarthy, he wrote a letter to Thompson telling him that unless the majority report recommended criminal prosecution he and fifteen other Conservatives would vote with the Opposition. The document is still in existence. Several of my friends have seen it. Girouard and Adams held out for a time, but Thompson persuaded them to amend the report to meet McCarthy's wishes. The report was adopted by the House of Commons. Now you see why we are being prosecuted."

Mr. McGreevy's statement is very circumstantial and there is no reason to doubt its accuracy. Moreover, there has been no attempt made to deny it, so far as we are aware. Assuming the correctness of McGreevy's version, it is easy to understand why the Government should be so unwilling to have the case brought to trial. It is evidently afraid of the revelations which would be likely to result. Owing to Dalton McCarthy's action Sir John Thompson was obliged to promise prosecution or suffer defeat on the report, and he chose the former alternative, but he probably thinks he can now afford to neglect his promise, since the Conservative majority in the House has increased, and since the morally sensitive section of the party has dwindled down to very small proportions. There is a rumor that the Attorney-General of Ontario will intervene to prevent the case from falling through, but he can hardly secure a continuance of the prosecution unless the Dominion Government, as the injured party, wishes it.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

There has been a curious want of animation in the presidential contest this year, for which it is hard to assign a likely reason. So far as could be judged by an outsider, the people of the United States were a little while ago as much interested in the question of who would be the pugilistic champion as in the outcome of the political combat. Probably the comparative quietness of the campaign and the small amount of speculation as to the result are largely due to the weakening of party ties and the consequent decrease of interest in the welfare of the old party organizations. There has been a very large movement of both Republicans and Democrats from the party ranks—how large will probably not be known until the voting day comes. The uncertainty arising out of the presence of independent tickets in the field is greater this year than it has ever been before, and even the most expert and self-confident of the political prophets are fain to confess their inability to canvass the situation with satisfying accuracy. The September state elections have not done much to lessen the uncertainty. Arkansas went Democratic, Maine and Vermont Republican, all as they were before. The majority in each case was smaller than that shown in the presidential contest of 1888. Republicans argue that the vote in Arkansas indicates the growth of the People's Party there, but the change does not appear large enough to foreshadow any break in the "solid South." Maine and Vermont gave smaller Republican majorities than in 1888, but larger than in 1890, wherefore it is hard to find in their elections a peg on which to hang a prediction. There is a report that the French-Canadian vote in Illinois will go solidly for the Democrats, and the question of denominational schools is also expected to help the Democratic party in that state. If these reports are correct there should be a prospect of Illinois declaring for Cleveland, but it would not be wise to put too much dependence on them.

The most important incident of the campaign recently is the action of David B. Hill in coming out strongly for Cleveland and Stevenson. Since the Chicago convention Senator Hill has kept steadily in the background, making no sign that he had overcome his feeling of disappointment. Owing to the mediation of ex-Secretary Whitney, however, a peace has been concluded between the Senator and the Democratic candidate, and on Monday night Mr. Hill appeared at a Brooklyn meeting and made a strong speech for the ticket. There seems to have been nothing indefinite or hesitant about his utterances; he declared himself emphatically a Democrat and a supporter of the party candidates. The concluding sentence of his address was direct enough to show his position very clearly. It was as follows:—"Let us close up our ranks and buckle on our armor for the fight with the determination to do all in our power for the triumph of our party and the election of our honored standard-bearers, Cleveland and Stevenson." In an earlier portion of his speech he said:—

Permit me to repeat what I had the honor of expressing to the Tammany Society on the Fourth of July last, before the echoes of the national convention had died away: Our course at the present time is plain. In the approaching struggle the Democracy of New York should present a solid front to the common enemy. Loyalty to cardinal Democratic principles and the regularly nominated candidates is the supreme duty of the hour. I reiterate these sentiments now.

Senator Hill took pains to present the tariff as the chief issue of the contest, and his remarks in regard to it are worth quoting as putting this issue very clearly. He said:

The Republican party advocates the doctrine that the government has a constitutional as well as moral right to impose tariff duties for the purpose of encouraging the building of private industries, by imposing duties sufficiently large to prevent foreign competition, irrespective of the needs of the treasury; while the Democratic party believes the government has only a right to impose duties necessary to raise sufficient revenue to support the government economically administered. This is the precise issue squarely stated.

And again:

If I were asked to define as concisely as possible the whole Democratic policy I should state it substantially as follows: "We favor a tariff for revenue only, limited to the necessities of the Government economically administered and so adjusted in application, so far as practicable, to prevent unequal burdens, encourage productive industries at home and afford a just compensation to labor, but not to create or foster monopolies."

It thus appears that Mr. Hill is prepared to heartily support both the candidates and the platform of his party, and the Democrats are much encouraged by the healing of the split. They have now a much better chance of carrying New York state, which they must do to secure a national victory. The Republicans might succeed without New York, but it would be well nigh impossible for the Democrats to do so. The support of Tammany and the Hill faction is therefore almost absolutely necessary for Cleveland and Stevenson.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Dominion Government is suing the town of Fort Arthur for the sum of $1596 duty on steel rails used in the construction of the electric tramway there. It seems rather strange that steels for railways should be admitted free of duty, while similar rails for tramways should be taxed so heavily. This is probably one of the ways in which the Government tries to encourage development and prosperity.

A few days ago the Dominion Ministers were at Petrolea telling the people that all was well with the country and that the "old policy" would ensure its prosperity. Now comes this dispatch from Quebec:—

The exodus of French Canadians from the province and especially from this section, to the United States, continues, apparently without any abatement. Within the last 20 days upwards of 25 families, belonging to Levis and its adjacent parishes, St. Joseph and St. David, have sold out all they had and taken their departure.

The Ministers may not have thought it worth their while to take note of so small a thing as this exodus from Quebec. Yet it might have been supposed that if the country's prosperity under the "national policy" had reached so high a degree as the Government and its organs allege, there would be no incentive for those French families to go abroad. But let the exodus go on as it will, the Ministers "have no new policy to formulate."

Reference was made a few days ago to the intention of Indiana Republicans to test the constitutionality of the Democratic gerrymander in that state. It appears that they have been successful at the outset, for Judge Bundy, of the Henry County circuit court, has decided that the redistribution bills of 1886 and 1891 were both unconstitutional. He instructs the election of officers and the posting of election notices under the law of 1879.

Says the Toronto Telegram:—Defeat hastened poor James Trow's death and taught him that in this country politics is war.

The old whip banked heavily on professions of friendship from the opposite side. He was one of the few Grits whom the late Sir John esteemed as a good fellow. He valued the good will of his opponents, and to retain it occasionally slighted such stalwart companions in arms as McMullen.

Yet, when James Trow was unseated on a quibble the men whose friendship he coveted used him worse than they used M. C. Cameron. His constituency was the first Ontario seat to be vacated. The election was kept back until sympathy with the unseated member had spent its force, and until the Government could attack his stronghold with all the prestige gained by a run of victories in the bye-elections.

There is no complaint in this statement of facts. James Trow tried to soften our politics with the gentler ways of private life. The reverses which killed him were his encouragement and a warning to other men who may think that private friendship is a better paying crop than political bitterness.

THE REAL CLEOPATRA.

Her Personal Magnetism Greater Than Her Beauty.

London Spectator: What was the inner character of Cleopatra? A voluptuous woman of the East, say the Romans, eager to enchain any master of a Roman army by the foulest arts, but the Roman oligarchy not only hated but dreaded Cleopatra. To them she was not only Asia incarnate, but the representative of that "regal" sway, that rule by volition instead of by traditional order, which, with their statesmanlike instinct, they saw the triumphant aristrocrat whom their system tended to produce would ultimately desire. They cursed her as the greatest of Asiatic harlots, whereas she was a Greek and used her charms chiefly as instruments to attain her ends, which were, first of all, the empire of the east, which her ancestors had striven for generations to acquire and nearly acquired, and to defeat the half-civilized and headless Roman power, which she hated with the hatred of a monarch and despised with the contempt of a true Greek.

Who were these barbarians that they should conquer men who were polished when they were savages? She always selected the same lover—the head of the invading Roman army,—and always used him to help her in founding, as she hoped, the empire of the East. Her attractive power was probably not her beauty. Her coins do not reveal a beautiful woman, but a broad-browed, thoughtful Queen, and Plutarch, in describing her, evidently speaks on the authority of men whose fathers had studied her face. "Her actual beauty, it is said, was not in itself so remarkable that none could be compared with her or that no one could see her without being struck by it, but the contact of her presence, if you lived with her, was irresistible; the attraction of her person, joined with the charm of her conversation and the character that attended all she said or did, was something bewitching. It was a pleasure merely to hear the sound of her voice, with which, like an instrument of many strings, she could pass from one language to another, so that there were few of the barbarian nations that she answered by an interpreter; to most of them she spoke herself, as to the Ethiopians, Troglodytes, Hebrews, Arabians, Syrians, Medes, Parthians and many others, whose languages she had learned."

Where Princess Marie Will Live.

When Princess Marie of Edinburgh is married to Prince Ferdinand of Roumania a considerable portion of her wedded life will be spent at the Schloss of Pelesch, near Sinaia, which is the summer residence of the King and Queen of Roumania. The house is built of red brick in the picturesque French Gothic style. It was erected by King Charles in 1886, cost upwards of $1,000,000. It is furnished throughout in the most expensive and elaborately artistic fashion, the lighting is by electricity, and there are all the latest conveniences. One suite of rooms is arranged exactly after the pattern of the gorgeous apartments in the Sultan's harem, which are so carefully secluded from masculine eyes. The grounds are laid out in Italian terraces, which slope gradually down to the bank of the noisy Polesck. The scenery all around is magnificent, for the palace stands on a high plateau, with the wooded slopes and peaks of the Carpathian Mountains stretching all around in an endless panarama of pine forests. In front runs the Pelesch, tumbling down a rough and romantic valley.

THE BEAVER AND THE BEAR.

Commander De Levron and Captain Baker Talk Seal Aboard the Cruiser Zabiaca.

The Canadian Skipper Boldly Demands Information and the Muscovite Gets Mad.

De Levron's Manner Harsh and Arrogant—"Never Mind Limits, no Catch Seal," He Says.

As was expected, yesterday's wind brought several sealing schooners up the straits, and at daylight this morning three new arrivals had dropped anchor in James Bay. They are the Victoria, Mary Ellen and C. H. Tupper.

The last named is the schooner that the Russians for some unaccountable reasons did not seize, although they boarded her and overhauled the captain's papers. The Tupper left here early in January, and since that time made a splendid catch, taking 1815 seals. Of these 552 were taken on the Russian side.

In speaking of his trip and experience with the Russian officer, Captain Baker said he reached Copper Island on the 1st of August and remained there until the 2nd of September. On the 10th of August the Russian cruiser Zabiaca was sighted, and shortly afterwards a boat in charge of a Russian officer and manned by twenty men came alongside the schooner.

"The Russians," said Captain Baker, "were a formidable looking crew. Each man was armed with a cutlass and revolver and carried a box of cartridges at his belt."

Captain Baker was ordered to come aboard the Zabiaca with all his papers, which he, of course, consented to do.

As he stepped aboard the cruiser the sealing captain was greeted in English by the Russian commander with "Let's see your papers," in a harsh, peremptory tone, as if addressing a serf or slave.

Captain Baker complied with the request, and then two other Russian officers joined their captain and proceeded to overhaul the schooner's papers. A chart was spread on the cabin table and the Russians carefully picked out the Tupper's daily positions and took them down in a notebook. This operation finished, the commander, De Levron, turned to Captain Baker, and in the same uncompromising tone and manner said, "Well, I will let you go this time, but will take your skins."

He then asked him when he had left Victoria and where he had been since.

"I left Victoria in January, and have been sealing on the Alaskan coast," replied the captain.

"No! no! that cannot be," said the commander.

Captain Baker contended that he was telling the truth, but the Russian maintained that "It could not be, as," said he, "your Government has stopped sealing on that side."

It was explained by Captain Baker that they were only prohibited from sealing in Behring sea, and the Russians were thereupon seemingly satisfied. They again overhauled the log and after much figuring found that the Tupper had not been within 60 miles of the island. Captain Baker submitted that he was in the Pacific ocean and at perfect liberty to follow his calling.

"Well, you can go this time," said the Zabiaca's commander, "but if I catch you here again I will take your schooner and skins."

Captain Baker was certainly glad to get off so easily, but he was not perfectly satisfied. He is not known as a prying individual, but he thought he would like to know just what extent of the Pacific Ocean the Russians did claim. He therefore civilly asked the question, and in answer the officers showed him a proclamation which stated that seal hunting was prohibited in Okhotsk sea and in all other Russian waters.

"But what are your limits?" persisted Captain Baker.

"You never mind limits; no catch seal," answered the Russian excitedly, resuming his arrogant demeanor and broken English.

This was all the satisfaction Captain Baker could get out of Commander De Levron, although he asked several more questions, the answers to which were threatening grunts or unctuous Muscovite smiles.

Commander De Levron told Captain Baker that he had seized the Ariel and Willie Macgowan of Victoria and three other Britishers and four Americans. He did not give the names of the latter seven. The Russian officer then tried to find out something about the steamer Thistle and the American topsail schooner Nymphe, both of which the Russians have been eagerly looking for.

"Why, they are over on the other side on a whaling cruise," answered Captain Baker, who intended to put the Muscovite off the track.

"No! no! I know better, they are here and I will catch them to-night," said the commander with a grin.

Captain Baker finding further questioning useless bade the Russians a polite adieu, and getting back on board his schooner laid his course for Victoria, not forgetting, however, to hang around for a little while and warn other schooners of the danger.

Before leaving he spoke the Annie E. Paint and Dora Sieward of Victoria, and the Henry Dennis of Seattle, and told them of his experience with the Russian cruiser. They were going to continue sealing for a few days, but as they could be on the lookout they had little fear of being seized. The Paint had taken 200 skins off Copper Island, the Sieward had taken 500, and the Henry Dennis 550.

"Do you think the Russian intended to seize any schooners after he left you?" asked the TIMES reporter to whom Captain Baker told his story.

"Yes, I do," said Captain Baker. "He will, I think seize any schooners found a little nearer to shore than I was, or any of those that he seemed so anxious to find."

A TERRIBLE HURRICANE.

The Tupper had an unusually rough passage on the way home. Said Capt. Baker, "I have been in a many a storm, but never have I encountered such a hurricane as the schooner passed through on the 9th instant. She ran for eighteen hours under bare poles, making 144 miles during that time. Oil bags were hung all around the vessel to keep the seas from breaking over. During all this not a spar was broken and the schooner when she came out of it was as staunch as ever. A few days later another storm was encountered, in which the main boom was broken and one of the jibs carried away.

The trip was otherwise a pleasant one and the crew enjoyed the very best of health.

THE MARY ELLEN'S TRIP.

Captain Charles F. Dillon, of the schooner Mary Ellen, was one of the lucky schooners, being informed of the Russians actions in time to get out of their way. He gave a TIMES representative the following account of the trip: "I spoke the W. P. Hall on the 19th of August 60 miles off Copper Island. Captain Brown informed me that the Russians had seized the Vancouver Belle and five other schooners, but he didn't remember what there names were. One of his men, however, said that the Carlotta G. Cox and Enterprise were among them. Billy Shields, one of the hunters lost from the E. B. Marvin, and the two boats crews of the Annie C. Moore also lost, were aboard the Russian man-of-war. Captain Brown was talking to Captain Copp and he said that he was treated well and was happy aboard but there were about 50 men forward that didn't appear to enjoy it. The man-of-war was bound to Petropaulovsky. They sighted the W. P. Hall, 25 miles southwest of Behring island. It was calm and the Hall's boats were out hunting. The man-of-war was a short distance off and fired a shot across her bow. When she got alongside Capt. Brown was told to bring his papers and log book aboard which he did. But the Russian captain was not satisfied. He sent Capt. Brown and an armed officer back to the schooner for his chart. When Capt. Brown got back to the man-of-war a prize crew was ready to go aboard the schooner but the commander for some reason changed his mind and only warned Capt. Brown to leave for home."

The following are the catches of the schooners spoken by the Mary Ellen: Maud S. 380; Umbrina, 420; Vancouver Belle, 1300; C. G. White, 170; Sadie Turpel, 600, total; Brenda, 130; W. A. Earle, 500; Sea Lion, 620. The Mary Ellen brought home 304 skins. On the way over she warned the Sea Lion of the danger of being seized. She made the trip from Attou Island in 25 days. The Mary Ellen had an Indian crew which she landed on the west coast.

THE VICTORIA'S RETURN.

The schooner Victoria, Captain Robins, returned home last evening with 600 skins for her season's work. One of the hunters on the Victoria heard that the Carlotta, G. Cox and the schooner Enterprise had been seized. The report, which is said to have started from the San Francisco schooner Kate and Anne, came in such a roundabout way, that the sealers place very little reliance upon it. The Victoria's hunter did not get the report direct from the Kate and Anne, but after there had been several cases of "somebody told somebody else." When the Kate and Anne was spoken by the E. B. Marvin on her way home, she knew nothing of the reported seizures.

WHAT PRESIDENT COX THINKS.

Capt. J. G. Cox, president of the Sealers' Association, was asked to-day what he thought of the Russians' actions in seizing some schooners while he allowed others to go with a warning.

"I think in the first place," said Capt. Cox' "that the officers of the Zabiaca did not know whether they were doing right or wrong when they seized the Afiel, Rosie Olsen and Willie McGowan. It will be remembered that when those seizures were made Commander De Levron hesitated before he decided to take the schooners and then he seemed to be at sea about what he was doing. It is very likely that upon returning to port with the schooners he had seized, the commander consulted with the officials and it was decided not to seize schooners found within a reasonable distance of shore. This seems all the more likely as the W. P. Hall, one of the schooners boarded by the Russians, was within twenty-five miles from shore, while these seized earlier were twice that distance out. In fact it is known that Commander De Levron did not know whether he had a right to seize the schooner as he told the captain of the Majestic that he thought it very likely that he would have to release the British schooners, but he was sure of the Americans as the captain of the U. S. steamer Albatross had told him to seize all the schooners he saw."

"Do you think that the British ships that have left Japan for the Siberian coast have gone to look after the sealers?"

"I think it is very likely they have," said Captain Cox. "I have thought right along that if any ships were sent there by the Imperial Government they would be sent from the China station. The distance between Japan and the Copper Islands is much shorter than from Esquimalt to Copper Island, and, of course, if anything was done it is not likely that ships would be sent from the Pacific squadron."

The sealers generally are better pleased with the situation and it is thought that the schooners will be all right yet, and that those seized will be returned to their owners.

Badly Crushed.

A boy named Geake, who lives on the Esquimalt road, had his foot badly crushed this morning in the coupling of two E. & N. railway cars. He was trying to cross between two cars while they were in motion. He had just placed his foot on the coupling when the cars came together. Dr. Frank Hall, who dressed the injured foot, thinks he can save it.

Y. M. C. A. Delegates.

Through a misunderstanding the steamer Kingston was held half an hour last evening for the Y.M.C.A. delegates going to the conference at Tacoma. Wednesday, to-day, is the date for the departure of the delegates, but the captain misunderstood the directions. Three delegates appeared on the wharf, and received instructions to come again this evening, when the steamer will sail at 9 promptly.

Counterfeit Bills.

Counterfeit U. S. treasury $10 notes have made their appearance in Seattle, and Victorians might do well to keep a sharp lookout for them. They are thus described:—The counterfeit is on the series of 1875, act of March 3, 1863, John Allison, register; John C. New, treasurer. The paper is very dark, portrait of Webster poorly engraved, lathe work fair, numbers poor and of a brick red color. In the line "This note is a legal tender for ten dollars" on the top of the face of the note there are no spaces between the words, and the letters are irregular. The "W" and "D.C." in "Washington, D. C." in the center of the genuine note are larger, but in the counterfeit they are of even size. On the back of the note, right panel, the word "this" is printed "tms."

The Only Sol Smith Russell.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer says of Sol Smith Russell: The comedy event of the season is without doubt the appearance of Sol Smith Russell in his great plays "Peaceful Valley" and "A Poor Relation." Mr. Russell is supported by a powerful company and will furnish a rich treat. Sol Smith Russell! There is nobody like him—nobody whose personality is so pleasing or whose acting is so thoroughly delightful. But it isn't acting; it is simply Russell. He can't help being funny. In his nature there is a strange commingling of comedy and pathos; it is this mixture which puts it in his power to carry his audience with him always, to move his hearers to laughter or to tears. These qualities appeal to every heart. In "A Poor Relation" Mr. Russell has a play which will give scope for his peculiar talents. The plot is of absorbing interest. This great actor appears at the Victoria Theatre this evening for one night only, and the opportunity of seeing him in the character of Noah Vale, "A Poor Relation," should not be missed.

ANGUS M'DONALD ARRESTED.

He is in Jail but no Charge is Yet Laid Against Him.

The relatives of the Indian killed by the bursting of a signal cannon on board the schooner Arietas, on the 20th of June, have requested an enquiry into the facts of the case. Supt. Hussey took the case up immediately upon the arrival of the Arietas and this morning Angus McDonald, one of the crew of the schooner, was arrested by Provincial Officer McNeil. No formal information has as yet been laid against McDonald, the police being busy gathering the facts.

McDonald was firing the gun and standing by it when it exploded. He escaped as by a miracle, the Indian who was a few feet distant being instantly killed. An enquiry will probably be held to-morrow.

SLADE, THE MEDIUM.

The Skeptics Will Have an Opportunity to Test Him Friday Night.

Mr. Slade, the medium who some years ago made quite a sensation in New York through his spiritualistic manifestations, will make his first appearance in this city Friday night, September 23rd, at the Victoria theatre. All agree that this seance is extraordinary, to a degree remarkable, unexcelled by any seance of the kind before the public. Slade leaves the audience to draw their own inference as to the motive force of his manifestations, neither claiming, as some do, to have the aid of supernatural powers, nor confessing that he is alone dependent upon his own exertions and dexterity. "If I do not have invisible aid, pray tell me how I do these things?" A highly nervous, but bright, intelligent gentleman he seems to be, without power to do one half the feats that are made a regular part of his seance. At the theatre on Friday night the skeptical may be presented with liberty to subject the gentleman to any reasonable test and free to detect what they can. A small admission fee will be charged.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN.

Is it not high time for the municipal authorities to decide something about James Bay Flats? The present position is certainly unsatisfactory. It is being rapidly filled up to the level of the adjoining street, and presumably the corporation have gone as far as they can towards encroaching upon the water space, but negotiations should be at once undertaken with a view to acquire the right to fill the whole of the space right up to the edge of the bridge. The property owners upon the Humboldt street side of the flats would probably sell their rights for a most reasonable sum because of the added value to their property, and the present unsightly mass of decayed rubbish might very speedily be utilized either for building sites or as Victoria's boulevard. As a utilitarian, I suggest the former use, as James Bay district is amply supplied with pleasant walks and recreation grounds. To an ordinary observer, this improvement might be accomplished without any outlay on the part of the citizens, as the value of the building sites, most of which would be classed as business property, would far outweigh the money paid for the water front rights and the cost of building a wall at the end of the Flats. The repair or rebuilding of the bridge is a question entirely independent of this matter, as probably this must be attended to shortly, whether the larger scheme is undertaken or not. Will not some alderman immortalize himself by attaching his name to this improvement. Already we associate an ex-alderman's name with a lake in Beacon Hill park; another wishes to be handed down to posterity as the champion of electric lighting, whilst the worthy Mayor desires to leave his "footprints on the sands of time" in the shape of a city hospital. Alderman Munn, this will benefit your ward, why not speak up?

What a vast improvement has taken place in the strength, symmetry and capacity of horses during the past few years in this province. Time was when nearly every animal was merely one-removed from the cayuse or broncho, and the fine, shapely carriage-horse, the buggy-cob, swift pacer, or draught animal, were conspicuous by their absence. There are not a few to-day of the former class in use in the city, and they are not without many merits for the farmer or poor man, but the rapid growth of civilization must cause the broncho class to hark back again to the prairies of the Northwest, or the mountain fastnesses of British Columbia. Written with a pen of iron upon adamant, with a sternness born of striving nature and practical life proclaim the "survival of the fittest." QUIZ.

The Wrecked Whaleback.

TACOMA, Sept. 20.—Capt. Mountfort, of this city, who told the Southern Pacific people at the time the whaleback Wetmore was chartered to carry coal to San Francisco, that he did not consider the vessel a success on this coast now says he believes the coal in the stranded vessel will be washed out of her hold just as soon as the hatches are opened and the sea has a chance to work. "The sand from the beach," he says, "being heavier than the coal will work down through and get under it, thus forcing the coal out. I guess that will be the result just as soon as the hatches are opened." Capt. Mountfort also gives as his opinion that before the iron for the next whaleback arrives it will be satisfactorily shown that the flat-bottomed whaleback is not suited to the ocean transportation business on this coast. He says a flat bottom and a sharp prow may answer, but with a flat bottom throughout it will never withstand the pounding of the sea any more than a ship upside down will withstand the beating of the waves. Capt. Mountfort put in many years as master of sailing vessels. The whaleback Wetmore is still on the sand at Marshfield, Ore. Capt. O'Brien is on board, but no effort to get her off has been made since Friday.

Wilhelm Catches a Cropper.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Emperor William was thrown from his horse during the cavalry manœuvres near Aklan on Saturday, and narrowly escaped being crushed by the horse. The Emperor was accompanied by his war minister and several members of the grand general staff. He was riding at a gallop through a field covered with grass, endeavoring to keep in view a cavalry charge some distance ahead. With his sound arm he held a field glass, while his other arm rested helplessly on the pommel of the saddle. His horse stumbled on the edge of a ditch concealed by the high grass, and before the Emperor could grasp the rains the animal rolled over. The Emperor shot over the brute's head. The horse scrambled up, bounded directly over the Emperor and bolted. The Emperor rose, laughing, before the members of his staff could dismount to help him. His coat was rent and his uniform stained, but he had not a bruise or a scratch. He ridiculed the anxiety of his staff, and refused to take any one of the proffered horses, and when his own horse had been caught he mounted and proceeded to discharge his duty.

Labor Troubles in Australia.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Sept. 20.—A deputation of 6000 persons called on Prime Minister Dibbs to-day to demand the release of the labor agitators arrested on account of the labor troubles at the Broke Hill Mines. Mr. Dibbs refused to see them till to-morrow. The mob became furious at this and rushed to the House of Parliament and tried to break open the doors, but the police kept them back. The crowd threatened violence and the authorities apprehend that an attempt will be made to release the prisoners.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 21.—The East Ohio conference adjourned last evening after a six days' session. Since the conference began people living west of the city have had nearly 200 chickens stolen, and while they do not charge the ministers with it, still the newspapers have called attention to the coincidence. The preachers did not seem to relish the joke.

THE RING.

MUST FIGHT OR FORFEIT.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Charley Mitchell has deposited a forfeit of $2500, and renewed his challenge to fight Jim Corbett, the champion of the world, for $10,000 a side and a purse of $20,000, at the Olympic Club in February. Mitchell says Corbett must fight within six months or forfeit the championship.

THE GRATITUDE OF CONQUERORS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Mike Donovan says there are two men in this country who can whip Corbett. "Why did I return Jim Corbett's check for $250?" said Professor Mike Donovan yesterday. "Why, because I'm no beggar. I am not depending on him or any other fighter. I'm through with fighters forever. I'll have nothing more to do with prize fights. It makes me sick to hear people say Corbett is a fine fellow. He is not. He treated me meanly. I helped him in every way, I even found a backer for him in this championship match.

It was I who made the match. I taught Corbett how to fight Sullivan, and worked with him every chance I got. Then I spent my vacation going to the great fight in New Orleans and advising him before it, and while it lasted. Well, I am done with fighters Corbett can keep his money. I shall never forget the slight he put on me. I'll make him remember it, too. He need not flatter himself for beating Sullivan. Sullivan never had any legs since his sickness after coming from England. He was not the Sullivan of old. I know two men in this country who can beat Corbett. Name them? No, he'll find them out quickly enough."

CORBETT'S WINNINGS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The final transaction in the recent championship battle between Corbett and John L. Sullivan took place yesterday morning, when Phil Dwyer, who acted as stakeholder in the match, turned over the stakes, amounting to $20,000 to Corbett's backers. Out of this amount Corbett received $10,325 in recognition of his clever work, which, together with a club purse of $25,000 makes his winnings $35,325. Speaking of the strained relations between him and the New York Athletic Club's boxing inspector, Corbett admitted sending a check for $250 to Donovan for services rendered, and having the same returned to him. Corbett said he refused to believe that "Mike" had made any disparaging remarks about him, and was inclined to believe that "Mike" had been wrongly quoted. He said it would surprise him very much if "Mike" had really made the statements attributed to him.

Sympathy in a Dog.

A butcher residing at Brodick, in the Isle of Arran, told me that he had two collie dogs at the same time, one old and the the other young. The old dog became useless through age and was drowned in the sea at Brodick. A few days afterward its body was washed ashore and it was discovered by the young dog, who was seen immediately to go to the butcher shop and take away a piece of meat and lay it at the dead dog's mouth. The young dog evidently thought that the meat would revive his old comrade, and thereby showed remarkable sympathy in aid of, to him, the apparent "weak."—The Spectator.

ECHOES OF THE ORIENT.

Excerpts of Interest From the Press of the Oriental Colonies.

The case of matricide which occurred in a town a short distance from Soochow some time ago, has been engaging the attention of the authorities, and its settlement is near at hand. In a couple of days the unnatural son will receive the full measure of the punishment which the law of the country prescribes for such a crime. It is said the murderer has been attempting to take his own life by refusing food, and has been spending his days in prison in wailing and copious weeping. Owing to this fact, the authorities will expedite the punishment to an earlier date.

"Is Ceylon tea so seriously deteriorating in quality year by year as is stated?" asks a Ceylon contemporary. "We emphatically deny it. Ceylon produces, and can produce, as fine a tea as ever she did, and, though Darjeeling tea is justly favored, it bears a very small proportion to the vast quantity of low-class tea turned out from Assam and low-lying gardens, whereas the very lowest class of our teas has not that roughness and harshness so characteristic of most Indian teas. That prices at the moment are exceedingly low we do not deny; but this is not due to decline in quality so much as to the fall in exchange, and the difficulty of finding new markets for increasing quantities of our produce."

A Kobe correspondent of the Naval and Military Record writes:—Our little community has recently had a storm in a teacup over the "pilling" of the parson, who was a candidate for admission to the English club. He is very strict in his principles, and has expressed his opinions somewhat harshly as to the sinfulness of Sunday tiffins, and one or two other little peccadilloes peculiar to life in the East. This aroused one clique, and they blackballed him. The other members are very indignant, for, apart from his Puritanical notions, our chaplain is in all respects an English gentleman, an Oxford M.A., and a thoroughly good sportsman, taking great interest in both athletics and aquatics. But cliqueism here prevails to an extent which Englishmen would hardly credit and the smaller the community the more they are divided.

A pitiful story comes from Goka, in Tonami-gun, Etchu province, a village situated in the hills. The place comprises 4000 cho of cultivated land and 20,000 cho of Government forest, the population numbering 13,009 and the houses 1260. Prior to the termination of the clan system they are said to have earned a comfortable livelihood by collecting saltpetre and manufacturing paper, to both of which industries the chief of the clan lent his kind assistance. Even now, the leading merchants of the place lend what assistance they can, but the decline in the price of saltpetre and foreign competition in the paper manufacturing have brought the majority to the lowest verge of poverty. They are subsisting on grasses, bran and the like, and it is said that unless they are speedily assisted by the government they will have to starve to death.

In this district, Tokyo, recently, tragedy has been all the go, the very air seems full of it. At the salt town of Shipa, 8 li distant, there was domestic trouble in one of the families when a mother-in-law undertook to punish her daughter-in-law. The latter resented it, and became so enraged that she called in several of her clan, who held the old woman while the fiendish daughter-in-law proceeded to prod her with an ugly weapon called a salt-tester. This salt-tester is a hollow iron rod, about four feet long, an inch in diameter, having a sharp point, and with this the daughter-in-law did thorough work, not simply giving one prod but many tens of the same. The magistrate of this city got wind of the matter, and after examining the woman, sentenced her to rather a novel punishment from a Western stand-point. Escorted by proper guards, she was made to parade the streets, calling out as she went along, "I am the woman that tried to kill my mother-in-law." "Don't you all act in this way or you will be punished like me." This form of punishment was resorted to only because the mother-in-law was reported to be doing well, but since the old woman has succumbed to her wounds, the accused, who is still in custody, it is said will have to suffer the full penalty of the law, which in such cases is strangulation.

Some pseudo-missionaries in Bangkok having refused a donation towards the "charity" which they profess to run, the Siam Free Press makes the following very pointed remarks: When the generous amateurs of Bangkok gave their time and talent for what they considered a meritorious work—that of supporting the Catholic College and the American Mission School—they never dreamed, we believe, that their clever efforts to please a Bangkok public would be considered ungodly. The smoking concert has been anathematized by the ladies of the Wang Lang school, and the check of $100 returned to Mr. Luke with the intimation, in so many words, that they could not soil their chaste fingers with money that bore unsavory recollections of Mr. Lessler in tights and muslin. The $100 check has been handed over to to the good sisters of the convent, who, of course, are by no means so particular as to the moral code as the learned ladies of Wang Lang. What is better still, the check has been accepted with a grateful letter of thanks for such an unexpected favor, and so ends a small but very instructive incident which, nevertheless, causes one to muse much and long on the ideas of ungodliness entertained at Wang Lang.

The Mahommedan inhabitants of a village in the Haifung Hsien, Shantung, who in former times have received severe punishment at the hands of the Imperial troops for brigandage and rebellious acts, are again committing frightful depredations amongst the people. There are several thousands of the followers of the Prophet engaged in pillaging the people, and committing all sorts of atrocities. They carry off females from the neighboring villages, and keep them in captivity for months. Tired of this they go to the families of the poor women, and demand a ransom for the release of the victims, and if their demands are not satisfied then they put the women to death. Recently the brigands have started an establishment where everything they take from the people is appraised, to which they then forced the people to go and redeem their lost articles at the prices fixed by the brigands. Should the people refuse to pay the price they ask, the articles are then distributed among the brigands, while a certain percentage of the spoil is reserved for buying arms and ammunition. The magistrate of the district is utterly powerless to do anything to the outlaws, and puts off the complaints of the victimized people, hence the deepest dissatisfaction is felt by all at the supineness of their cowardly administrator. The people are thinking now of helping themselves, and a volunteer corps will be formed to fight the brigands. A man named Wang is at the head of the movement, and he and his band of men have hastened to Chining to interview the governor on the subject.

THAT LITTLE BOOK!

Every mother in Canada should read that little book, "Mother's Guide and Baby's Welfare," which has just been issued by the manufacturers of the popular Lactated Food. This book contains information of great value for every mother, and should be carefully read.

Mothers who read this interesting book, will note that the celebrated Dr. T. Milner Fothergill, of London, England, has written most favorably about Lactated Food. It is well known that Dr. Fothergill was the greatest English authority on "Dietetics;" therefore his opinions carry great weight.

The mothers of Canada who wish to secure this little book will please send their address to the Wells & Richardson Co., Montreal, who will send it free of charge.

Mr. S. Perry Mills Spiritedly Conducts the Defence of His Several Clients.

He is Partially Successful, Getting One Woman Off on a Technicality.

S. Perry Mills, the lawyer, was duly on deck in the police court this morning. He came with a satchel full of law books, which he hastily arranged upon the table before him. He asked for foolscap and began taking notes. Mr. Mills was the counsel engaged by the keepers and the inmates of the houses of ill-fame raided a few days ago, and who pleaded not guilty. This morning was the adjourned date of the trial. The women drove up to the police court in three open hacks. The hacks waited for them during the trial. It was a few minutes past 10 o'clock, the hour of opening the court, when Magistrate McCrae appeared and took his seat.

"Order! order!" The stentorian voice of the officer in charge sounded throughout the court room. The buzz of hundreds of voices immediately gave way to a dead silence. Chief of Police Sheppard stood up and all eyes were centered upon him, as it was generally supposed that the women's cases would first be called. But they were disappointed, the first name called was that of John O'Leary, a cripple, who pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness for the first time and was liberated. Chas. Wilson was fined $5 for a like offense. William Gardiner when inebriated promenaded around the grounds of the penitentiary, accosted Jailor Liddel and used foul language towards him. Ten dollars or 14 days was the sentence of the court. These proceedings took 28 minutes. The crowd appeared to be impatient.

Then Lawyer Crease rose and claimed that the case in which he was interested, the alleged assault by Charles King and William Elves on a Chinama should next come before the court. Mr. Mills did not want to keep the women in court all morning and asked the court to "sidetrack" the assault suit. Lawyer Crease would not be "sidetracked". A compromise was agreed to and it was decided that Lawyer Mills should go on with his case in the morning, and that in any event the assault case should take precedence the afternoon.

A question of dealing with the cases then arose. Lawyer Mills wanted to take one of the cases and make that a test case for the remainder. The court said that it would only decide every case upon its own merits. The court asked Mr. Mills which of his clients he wished to first defend. Mr. Mills threw the choice of selection upon Chief Sheppard, who accorded the honor to Lyne Woodruff.

"Lyne Woodruff," called the clerk, and a young, pale-faced, slimly-built woman, dressed in black and heavily veiled, rose from among the women who occupied a seat to the left of the bench.

"You are charged with being the keeper of a house of ill-fame. How do you plead?" This question was asked by Magistrate McCrae. Mr. Mills replied "Not guilty." Mr. Mills then asked, through the court, that Chief Sheppard produce the warrant under which he arrested the women on Sunday night. He understood that there was no warrant. The magistrate stated he would make a note of the point and requested the lawyer to proceed. Mr. Mills read from the Criminal Procedure Act, and construed that legislation to mean that a constable could only arrest a person without a warrant where there was a reasonable suspicion that that person was about to commit a felony. A constable could not arrest without a warrant for a misdemeanor unless a breach of the peace was presumptive. Under the vagrancy act officers could not enter a private house without telling the inmates what he intends to do. Roscoe and Taschereau, Mr. Mills stated, bore him out in his contentions.

Mr. Macrae—"But these women were not charged under the vagrancy act."

Mr. Mills—"I think that they were."

Chief Sheppard—"Under the summary trials act."

Mr. Mills contended that the summary trials act was but a form of procedure and that it was the vagrancy act that was the legislation. But Magistrate Macrae held a different opinion and overruled Mr. Mills, stating that in continuous offenses the summary trials act itself contained the power. Mr. Mills said that it did not matter about the acts. But the point he wished to impress upon the court was that if the police could arrest these women without a warrant the could arrest a doctor, a lawyer (laughter), or even a minister (laughter), if found in one of these places on certain lawful business (great laughter). The court crier shouted the audience to order. Magistrate Macrae then asked Mr. Mills in the interest of his clients and in the public interest, if it were better that the cases should not be proceeded with if there were not an honest defense.

Mr. Mills stated it was little use going on if the court thought them guilty. The court explained that he was misunderstood. It was but to facilitate matters.

Sergeant Lavin was called by Chief Sheppard. Lavin gave evidence that the Woodruff woman had been known to him for years as a woman of ill-fame. Witness knew that her house on Douglas street had been frequented by different men upon different nights, and that women having the reputation of being lewd had been seen by him going in the house.

Mr. Mills stated that the charge only applied to Sunday, September 18th, and that what witness saw before could not be offered in evidence.

The court maintained that the law was against Mr. Mills upon that point. Chief Sheppard stopped his examination. The court then began to ask questions of the witness much to the chagrin of Mr. Mills, who stated that he would prefer his learned friend, the chief, to take the part of prosecutor. Mr. McCrae said he felt it his duty to ask the questions and Mr. Mills a little later again told the court that it was useless taking up the time of the court, if the court were convinced that these women were guilty. Sergeant Hawton told the court that upon one particular night he had seen fourteen men come out of the house and four go in. Witness said that he had seen the women one night, when it was his duty to go into the house, in a half-dressed condition. "They had nothing on hardly at all," said the witness.

Mr. Mills pressed that the witness be more explicit. Sergeant Hawton said it might have been a night dress or something of that kind that they were wearing. Music and singing was kept up to an early hour in the morning. As the witness explained it they were having a little fun.

Mr. Mills—Don't you have a little fun sometimes (laughter) on Government street laughing and talking?

Witness—Yes, sir, in the court. (Laughter.)

Constable McDonald and Constable Robert Walker told further stories about the egress and ingress of man from and into that house during the small hours of the morning.

The court—I will have to dismiss this case on a technicality. It has not been proved that Miss Woodruff is the keeper of a house of ill-fame and that is the charge against her. Miss Woodruff is dismissed.

In the case against Louisa Jones, keeper, Chief Shepperd gave evidence that the woman was the keeper. That was the first point brought out by him.

Mr. Mills stated that at the time of the raid the Jones woman was not the keeper, and that she had only just returned to the city from a two months' absence.

Sergeant Hawton swore that the Jones woman had asked him not to "raid" her on Sunday night, as she expected a party of young men and she would be able to make $50 that night.

Mr. Mills contended that the evidence had fallen short of the mark. He alleged that it must be proved that the house was a house for the common reception of men and women for prostitution. Archibalds J. had so decided. And assuming that she was a prostitute, Rose J. had given it that she was not guilty of the offence in the eyes of the law. And Butler J. had maintained that these women must have a lodging. The prosecution ought to have shown that the house was kept for prostitution. The mere fact that women lived in it was not proof, and the legal presumption was in favor of morality.

Mr. Macrae—"Do you mean to say that illicit intercourse should be proved?"

Mr. Mills did not wish to put it so strongly, and he thought that an order had not been made out. He affirmed that since the police had been instructed to raid the houses the women who had lived in them had sought legal advice. And the advice was that they discontinue their practices. The city would not prevent them from living there. They must have a roof over their heads. They had followed the instructions. He thought it would be well to strike at the root of the evil. It was the owners of the houses who rented the places at exorbitant prices, and in some cases members of the church that complained were to blame. These women wanted to get out of town and he would throw the case on the mercy of the court.

The court stated that it found the charge established and sentenced the defendant to one hour in jail, and to be fined $50. A plea of guilty was then entered by Lawyer Mills for the other cases. The remaining keeper was fined $50 and one hour in jail, and the inmates $25 and one hour in jail. They were Maude Lord, keeper, Lottie Simpson; Stella Elliott, Stella Wanthard, Lizzie Murdock, Claude Kent and Lizzie Wilson, inmates.
